Fund Update : R-co Conviction Equity Value Euro — March 2026

Equity markets performed unevenly in a highly volatile February, marked on the one hand by rising international tensions, but also by multiple fears related to AI. This environment weighed on the US market (S&P down 0.9%)[1], where macroeconomic data was mixed (fourth-quarter 2025 GDP lower than expected at +1.4%, but unemployment rate down to 4.3%)[1]. The MSCI World rose +1.5%, helped in particular by the eurozone, which outperformed at +3.5% in a diversification strategy[1]. Gold continued to benefit from its status as a safe haven, rising +7.9%[1].

In the eurozone, the narrative of potential disruption from AI played a central role in the dispersion of sector performance. The new acronym "HALO" – Heavy Asset Low Obsolescence – highlighted the sectors that investors considered least susceptible to disruption: telecoms (+18.7%), food distribution (+17.8%) and real estate (+13.1%)[1]. Conversely, media fell by -7.7% and banks (-2.4%)[1] also appeared to be under threat in the eyes of the market. It should be noted that while the technology sector ended the month flat, there was considerable dispersion according to this same analysis. Hardware players were favored, such as STMicro (+19.2%), while software and IT services companies were heavily penalized (Dassault Système -20.1%, CapGemini -18.5%)[1].

In terms of management style, the Value style[2] (+3.9%), driven by Telecoms and Energy (12.4%), outperformed the market by 45 basis points and the Growth style[3] by 60 basis points[1]. The valuation premium of Growth relative to Value remained at 72% over the month[1]. We remain optimistic that this premium, which began normalizing three years ago, will continue to do so given i) the high interest rate environment, which is set to persist, and ii) the revival of the European economy, which appears to be on the horizon despite the tense geopolitical context and should benefit the financial and industrial sectors.

The R-co Conviction Equity Value Euro fund underperformed the market, rising by

+1.8%[4]. This underperformance was mainly due to our overexposure to the banking sector. From a stock selection perspective, the market's perception of “AI losers” cost us dearly through our positions in Capgemini and Wolters Kluwer (-13.7%). In the automotive sector, Stellantis' (-16.3%) profit warning led to a sudden correction in the stock[4].

During the month, we built a new position in Heidelberger Materials. The German group suffered from rumors of the European Commission easing carbon quotas. Although we believe the Commission is now taking a more pragmatic approach, we think that it will only partially back down on its climate ambitions. We also initiated a position in the real estate group Unibail-Rodamco due to the quality of its portfolio and the still significant discount on commercial real estate at a time when real assets appear to be regaining their appeal. We also made a few intra-sector arbitrage trades, particularly in telecommunications, selling part of our KPN position to strengthen Deutsche Telekom.

Europe and the eurozone in particular are once again becoming genuine sources of diversification in the equity markets, which is also reflected in the fundraising figures. Less concentrated than the United States, it combines still relatively attractive valuations with natural hedging in the event of a decline in the dollar. In 2026, the combination of infrastructure plans in Germany and European rearmament could transform already solid resilience into a more sustainable recovery. This remains our central scenario despite the current geopolitical turmoil. Our portfolio remains positioned to capture this momentum and support this phase of revitalization.

[2] A “value” strategy refers to an investor seeking out companies that are undervalued by the market at a given point in time, i.e., whose market valuation is lower than it should be based on the company's results and asset value. Value investors select stocks with low price/book ratios or high dividend yields.
[3] Investors favoring the “growth” style focus primarily on the potential for growth in corporate earnings, hoping that revenue and earnings growth will exceed that of their sector or the market average.

The risk indicator assumes that you hold the product for 5 years. The actual risk may be very different if you opt to exit before maturity, and you may get less in return. We have classified this product in risk class 5 out of 7, which is between medium and high risk and mainly reflects its positioning on the Eurozone equity market. In other words, the potential losses linked to the product's future results are between medium and high, and if the situation were to deteriorate on the markets, it is likely that our ability to pay you would be affected. As this product does not provide market protection or a capital guarantee, you could lose all or part of your investment.

Figures provided relate to previous years. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance and is not constant over time. The value of investments and the income derived from them may vary both upwards and downwards, and is not guaranteed. The value of investments and the income derived from them may vary both upwards and downwards, and is not guaranteed. It is therefore possible that you may not recover the amount originally invested. Exchange rates variation may increase or decrease the value of the investments and the resulting income when the reference currency of the UCI is different from the currency of your country of residence. UCIs whose investment policy is aimed more specifically at specialised markets or sectors (such as emerging markets) are generally more volatile than common and diversified allocation funds. For a volatile mutual fund, the fluctuations may be particularly large, and the value of the investment may therefore fall sharply. The performances presented do not take into account any fees and commissions received on the subscription and redemption of units or shares of the UCI herein.
