

Fund Update : R-co Conviction Equity Value Euro — December 2025

Anthony Bailly
Head of European Equity

Global markets were marked by several key topics in November, including the end of the U.S. government shutdown, fears of a speculative bubble in Artificial Intelligence, volatility around expectations of Fed rate cuts, and, at the end of the month, renewed hopes for a resolution to the conflict in Ukraine. While nervousness around AI ultimately weighed on the U.S. market, with the S&P 500 down -0.4%, which inevitably impacted the MSCI World (-0.3%), the European geopolitical context allowed the Eurozone to outperform, rising by +0.4%¹.

Vincent Iméneuraët
European Equities Portfolio
Manager

This geopolitical context in Europe benefited construction (+6.4%) and commodities (+6.1%), but penalized industrial goods and services (-5.6%), impacted by the decline in defense stocks (Rheinmetall -13%). The technology sector (-4.1%)¹ also suffered from uncertainties related to Artificial Intelligence.

In terms of investment style, November strongly favored Value², which rose by +2.6%, compared to a -2% decline for Growth³. The outperformance of Value over Growth increased during the month, returning close to 20 points year-to-date¹. The valuation premium of Growth versus Value fell from 84% to 78%, continuing the normalization trend that began in October 2022. We believe this normalization should continue, given (i) the high and persistent interest rate environment, and (ii) the revitalization of the European economy, which should benefit financial and industrial sectors.

The R-co Conviction Equity Value Euro fund benefited from this style bias (+1.0%), outperforming its benchmark by 67 basis points over the month⁴. Our underweight in technology and defense was favorable for allocation effect, the main contributor to outperformance this month. The selection effect was neutral, with strong positive contributions (Wienerberger +14.7%, DHL +12.6%, Société Générale +8.9%), but also some disappointments (Wolters Kluwer -13.8%, EDPR -9.5%)⁴.

During the month, we continued to reduce our exposure to France by closing our position in BNP Paribas, which we had already neutralized about two months ago. Our confidence in the management of France's leading bank remains limited, and we preferred to reallocate this position across our other banking stocks. We continue to view the sector as the most attractive, given its low valuation, our constructive outlook on the European economy, and the highly favorable interest rate environment (high rates and a steepening yield curve). We also made some partial adjustments to trim positions that had recently outperformed (RWE, Ryanair), and to strengthen convictions in stocks we believe are experiencing temporary weakness (Technip Energies, Kerry Group).

Investments related to infrastructure projects in Germany and European rearmament should generate a virtuous circle for the entire region. The adoption of the German 2026 budget on November 28 further strengthens our conviction in this dynamic. In this context, the Eurozone represents an attractive diversification opportunity within equity markets. It benefits from a macroeconomic trend toward reacceleration, much lower concentration than the U.S., still very reasonable valuations, and natural protection against a potential weakening of the dollar. Our portfolio is structured to take advantage of these favorable factors and support this phase of revitalization.

[2] A "value" strategy is when the investor looks for companies that are undervalued by the market at a given time, i.e. whose market valuation is lower than it should be in relation to the company's results and the value of the company's assets. Value investors select stocks with low price-to-book ratios or high dividend yields.

[3] The "growth" style investor focuses mainly on the growth potential of corporate earnings in the hope that the growth in sales and earnings will be higher than that of his sector or the market average.

The risk indicator assumes that you hold the product for 5 years. The actual risk may be very different if you opt to exit before maturity, and you may get less in return. We have classified this product in risk class 5 out of 7, which is between medium and high risk and mainly reflects its positioning on the Eurozone equity market. In other words, the potential losses linked to the product's future results are between medium and high, and if the situation were to deteriorate on the markets, it is likely that our ability to pay you would be affected. As this product does not provide market protection or a capital guarantee, you could lose all or part of your investment.

Figures provided relate to previous years. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance and is not constant over time. The value of investments and the income derived from them may vary both upwards and downwards, and is not guaranteed. The value of investments and the income derived from them may vary both upwards and downwards, and is not guaranteed. It is therefore possible that you may not recover the amount originally invested. Exchange rates variation may increase or decrease the value of the investments and the resulting income when the reference currency of the UCI is different from the currency of your country of residence. UCIs whose investment policy is aimed more specifically at specialised markets or sectors (such as emerging markets) are generally more volatile than common and diversified allocation funds. For a volatile mutual fund, the fluctuations may be particularly large, and the value of the investment may therefore fall sharply. The performances presented do not take into account any fees and commissions received on the subscription and redemption of units or shares of the UCI herein.
